From Humble Beginnings to Olympic Glory

The origins of race walking can be traced back to the early 19th century. In 1831, a group of British soldiers were challenged to walk from London to Brighton in less than 12 hours. This event was a huge success, and it soon became a popular sport for both men and women.

Race walking was first included in the Olympic Games in 1908. The first Olympic race walking event was a 3,500-meter race for men. The winner of this event was George Larnar of Great Britain.

Race walking has continued to grow in popularity over the years. In 1912, the first women's race walking event was added to the Olympic Games. The first woman to win an Olympic race walking event was Fanny Blankers-Koen of the Netherlands.

The Rules of Race Walking

Race walking is a unique sport that has its own set of rules. The most important rule is that the walker must always keep one foot on the ground. This rule ensures that the walker is not running or jogging.

Other rules of race walking include:

- The walker must not jump or leap.
- The walker must not bend their knee at an angle greater than 90 degrees.
- The walker must not touch the ground with their knee.

The World's Greatest Race Walkers

Over the years, there have been many great race walkers. Some of the most famous race walkers include:

- Johnathan Swift
- Jared Tallent
- Elena Lashmanova
- Liu Hong

- Yelena Nikolaeva
